THE LINKEDIN LEAD ENGINE

Clients, not just likes.

The Field Guide: Write Posts That Reach the Right People and Start the Right Conversations

MM

MAYANK MISHRA
Founder, ThriveXLabs

REVOPS.EDEN.SO

CONTENTS

Why I Wrote This: Reach Is the Wrong Finish Line

1. Viral ≠ Valuable

2. The Anatomy of a Post That Converts

3. The Hook and the Rehook

4. The Right-Person Principle

5. The Four Posts Every Business Needs

6. CTAs That Create Conversations

Your 7-Day Quick Start

Go Further: The Complete Edition

WHY I WROTE THIS: REACH IS THE WRONG FINISH LINE

I'm not a LinkedIn influencer. Most of my posts reach a few hundred people.

What I've done is build demand. I scaled two EdTech platforms on organic growth. This year I ran growth for an expert marketplace that reached 12.5k users in three months. The first 1,000 sign-ups took months. The next 1,000 came in seven days.

Working with more than a thousand consultants and coaches trying to turn their expertise into clients, I noticed something that changed how I think about LinkedIn:

Reach didn't predict results.

The accounts with the biggest followings often converted worse than people with a few thousand engaged followers. And one of the cleanest wins I saw had nothing to do with virality. An expert added a booking link to a single, specific post that explained one problem for one kind of buyer, and got a booking from it. No funnel. No sequence.

That's the idea behind this guide:

> Virality is the distribution engine. Relevance, authority and conversion are the lead engine.

The goal isn't to get 100,000 people to like your post. It's to get the right 100 to 1,000 people to think: "This person understands my problem. I should talk to them."

This Field Guide gives you the core of the method, and you can use it on your next post today.

Mayank Mishra, Founder, ThriveXLabs

1. VIRAL ≠ VALUABLE

A post can get 200,000 impressions, 5,000 likes and 700 comments, and generate zero clients.

Another can get 18,000 impressions, 300 likes and 40 comments, and generate three ideal clients.

(Illustrative numbers, but every B2B operator has seen this pattern.)

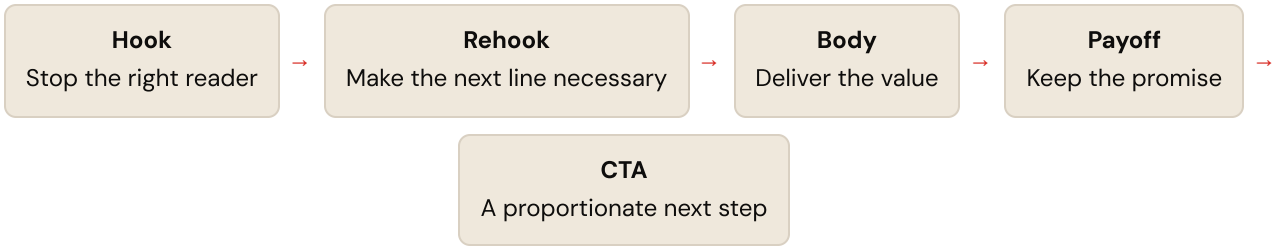

The second post is more valuable. So the question isn't "How do I get more views?" It's:

> How do I engineer attention from people who have a reason to buy?

Vanity LinkedIn	Business LinkedIn
More impressions	More relevant impressions
More likes	More authority with the right people
More followers	More profile visits from potential buyers
More comments	More qualified conversations

Optimize for qualified attention: attention from people whose situation makes your expertise relevant.

2. THE ANATOMY OF A POST THAT CONVERTS

And the five things every post needs, V.I.R.A.L.:

	Ask yourself
Voice	Does this sound like a human who understands the work?
Intrigue	Would the right reader need the next line?
Relevance	Would my ideal buyer recognize themselves?
Authority	What gives them grounds to believe me?
Lesson	What can they now do or decide?

The promise–payoff contract: the hook makes a promise, and the body keeps it. Never withhold the promised insight to force a DM. Give the insight away, and offer help with implementation.

3. THE HOOK AND THE REHOOK

Most people obsess over line one. Experts write lines one to three as a unit.

> I almost quit my business.
>
> Not because it was failing.
>
> Because it was succeeding in the wrong way.

The hook earns a glance. The rehook earns the read, because it adds information: a mechanism, a consequence or a narrower audience. "You won't believe what happens next" adds nothing.

Ten hooks to adapt

Type	Template
Problem reframe	Most [audience] don't have a [assumed problem]. They have a [real problem].
Upstream check	Before fixing [visible symptom], check [upstream factor].
Contrarian	[Popular advice] works until [constraint].
Tool limit	[Tool] can't decide [human question].
Scene	"[Common request you hear]." Every [role] has heard this one.
How I	Here's how I'd [goal] with [constraint]...
Mistake	The mistake isn't [surface issue]. It's [diagnosis].
Comparison	Two [similar things]. One important difference: [factor].
Decision	Before buying [solution], decide [prerequisite].
Direct address	[Role] who [situation]: read this before [decision].

Three rehook moves

- Narrow: "This matters most when the founder still approves every proposal."
- Complicate: "The team may be following the process exactly. The process may be missing the decision."
- Preview: "Here are three places to check before you change your price."

The 15-word test: can you say your hook's core idea in 15 words or fewer, without losing something essential?

4. THE RIGHT-PERSON PRINCIPLE

A great post doesn't appeal to everyone. It makes your ideal buyer feel unusually understood.

Instead of: "5 ways to improve your marketing."
Write: "5 things SaaS founders should stop doing if their pipeline depends on founder-led sales."

Smaller audience, better audience.

Broad	Specific	Commercially relevant
"Better marketing"	"More inquiries for B2B consultants"	"Why inquiries from your lead magnet don't match the service you sell"
"Financial tips for startups"	"Cash planning for seed-stage SaaS"	"The three numbers your board asks about 9 months after your seed round"

The relevance filter. Before writing, complete three lines: This is for… · They recognize the problem when… · After reading, they can…

Want the full engine? The LinkedIn Lead Engine: Complete Edition covers 26 chapters, 50 hooks, 25 rehooks, 25 post structures and a 30-day challenge, plus the Content Engine Tracker and the AI Post Coach. revops.eden.so

5. THE FOUR POSTS EVERY BUSINESS NEEDS

Job	Goal	Example engines
Attraction	Reach the right new people	Story, contrarian, list
Authority	Prove your thinking	How-to, case study, lessons learned
Relationship	Deepen connection	Field question, behind the scenes
Conversion	Make the next step clear	Offer with boundaries, commercial FAQ

A healthy week of five posts: 1 attraction · 2 authority · 1 relationship · 1 conversion.

Authority = Experience + Evidence + Insight. Don't write "I'm an expert in sales." Show something like "We tested four outbound approaches across 137 opportunities. Here's what happened," using your own real numbers.

Match the reader's awareness

6. CTAS THAT CREATE CONVERSATIONS

"Agree?" "Thoughts?" "Comment YES." These ask for effort without giving a reason, and LinkedIn has said it's reducing this kind of engagement bait. Use the CTA ladder instead, and climb only as far as the post has earned:

Rung	Example
Application	"Check one stalled proposal for an owner, a decision and a date."
Experience	"What's the biggest bottleneck you're seeing?"
Resource	"The one-page review sheet is linked below. No email needed."
Conversation	"If you're unsure whether it's qualification or ownership, message me the stage where it stalls."
Commercial	"If you're solving this this quarter, message me about a pipeline review."

Turn comments into conversations

- Bad: "Thanks! DM me if interested."
- Better: "Interesting that you mentioned hiring. Is the bigger issue getting enough candidates, or finding ones with the right experience?"

Reply to the substance, not the opportunity. Move to DM only when they ask or the details get sensitive, and bring the context with you.

YOUR 7-DAY QUICK START

Day	Do this
1	Write your buyer situation statement: "I help [who] dealing with [problem] when [trigger], so they can [change]."
2	Collect five exact phrases your buyers use about the problem.
3	Fix your profile: headline = audience + problem + method. Run the stranger test on it.
4	Write ten hooks for one problem. Keep two. Write three rehooks for the best one.
5	Publish an authority post (a how-to or diagnostic list) with an application or experience CTA.
6	Reply to every relevant comment with a question about their situation.
7	Review: which responses came from people who could buy? Pick next week's problem from them.

GO FURTHER: THE COMPLETE EDITION

This guide gives you the core ideas. The Complete Edition gives you the whole engine, and the tools to run it every week.

	Field Guide (free)	Complete Edition + Implementation System
Viral ≠ valuable, and qualified attention	✓	✓, in depth, with the two diagnostic equations
Post anatomy and V.I.R.A.L.	✓	✓, plus the L.E.A.D. follow-through and the V.A.L.U.E. edit
Hooks	10 templates	50 templates, including real examples from the author's feed
Rehooks	3 moves	25 templates
Post structures	—	25 complete structures
The seven post engines	—	✓
Authority, the evidence capsule and a proof ledger	Intro	✓
Awareness ladder and the four post jobs	Summary	✓, with a full planning system
Lead magnet design	—	✓
Comments → conversations → clients	Tips	Full chapters, with end-to-end examples
Profile conversion system	—	✓
Measurement without fake attribution	—	✓
Annotated swipe file	—	✓
30-day plan	7-day quick start	Full 30-day challenge
Content Engine Tracker (spreadsheet)	—	✓
AI Post Coach (briefs, hooks, drafts, teardowns)	—	✓
Printable Field Kit	—	✓

Get the Complete Edition

revops.eden.so

Want it built for your B2B business?

At ThriveXLabs I build and run outbound-led sales and content-to-pipeline systems for B2B companies. Start at the same link.

Scan to visit
revops.eden.so

Teaching examples and figures are illustrative unless identified as the author's own. Author figures describe one business in one period and are not benchmarks. LinkedIn is a trademark of its owner; this guide is independent. © 2026 Mayank Mishra · ThriveXLabs.